PREFACE

The material for this history of the Canadian and American descendants of John Brand was compiled between the years 1930 and 1942. The author wishes to acknowledge his sincere gratitude to the many members of the Brand family and collateral lines who gave their time and energy in looking up old records and collecting material.

INTRODUCTION

In Anglo-Saxon (the language which later evolved into English) the terms "brand" and "brander" meant "sword" and "swordsmen" respectively. The term "brander" was afterwards applied to certain retainers who followed in the service of various noblemen as bodyguards.

Back in an age of hand-to-hand conflict, when every man had to depend upon the strength of his own arm, and the temper of his own steel, a tried and trusted weapon was naturally regarded with a feeling amounting almost to affection. We find both in the old Teutonic and Celtic myths that the sword of a celebrated warrior was often distinguished by a proper name, and that magical or peculiar properties were not unfrequently attributed to it. It seems also that there were some names of weapons more used in poetry and mythology, and more honorable, so to speak, which were commonly adopted for the names of men. Thus brand, a poetical word, signifying literally a torch, but metaphorically a sword from its shining, and which was one of the names of Odin was greatly in favor as a name of men. It seems, however, to have been Scandinavian or Angle to begin with, rather than Saxon.

Mark A. Lower in his book, "A Dictionary of the Family Names of the United Kingdom" (1860, John Russell Smith, Publisher, London) has the following to say regarding the origin of the name "Brand": "Old Norse brandr, a sword, whence the Old English brand, with the same meaning. As a personal name it occurs in the genealogy of the Northumbrian kings from Woden. It was a very common old Scandinavian name, and is still used in Iceland. Brand is found in the Domesday Book as a previous tenant. Mr. Denham observes, that it is rather singular that the ordinary synonym for a sword should be brand. The name of the weapon taken from King Bucar by the Cid was Tizona, or the fire-brand. And he adds that 'many swords were flamboyant, hence the word brand'." Brand is found as a name in the Book and Roll of Battle Abbey.

Brand was an English baptismal name in the days before surnames came into general use throughout England. In fact the name Brand continued as a baptismal name for some time after the adoption of surnames throughout the country between the 11th and 14th centuries.

The principal home of the name Brand in England is in the counties of Essex and Hertfordshire, counties lying north and north-east of the city of London. H.P. Guppy, in his work entitled The Homes of Family Names, finds that 24 people out of every 10,000 (or approximately one person out of every

In the 13th century the name Brand was also represented in Lincolnshire and Oxfordshire, being found in the "Hundred rolls" of that time. In fact there exists in Lincolnshire today a parish by the name of Brand. An ancient pedigree of the Brands of Suffolk County may be found in volume 61 of the Harlian Visitation Series, and in volume 5 of The East Anglian, New Series.

HOW TO USE THIS GENEALOGY

To trace back your own pedigree, turn first to the index at the end of this book. Look up your name, following which will be found a number, which is the number that goes with that name. Following this number is the number of the page upon which the genealogical sketch will be found. Once you have located yourself in the book, it is an easy matter to locate your parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, etc. Suppose for example that the number accompanying your name is 4311. In such case your parents will bear the number 431, your grandparents the number 43 and your great-grandparents the number 4. These numbers are all arranged in numerical order and can be found in their proper place in the book without even consulting the index. The various descendants of John Brand are arranged by generations. Immediately following this page is a reference chart, which will make it quite simple to trace and comprehend at a glance the various relationships existing between the many branches of the family.

INTER-RELATIONSHIP

THE CANADIAN AND AMERICAN DESCENDANTS OF JOHN BRAND OF ACTON, SUFFOLK COUNTY, ENGLAND, who was the son of JACOB BRAND. The children of John Brand who emigrated to Canada and the United States are listed in the first column to the left. The next generation will be found in the next column to the right, etc. The name in parentheses following a woman's name indicates the name she took at the time of her marriage. Those still living have their names in capital letters (year 1942).

Indicates that the person after whose name it occurs lived to adulthood but never married.

Indicates that the person after whose name it occurs married but had no offspring.

#Indicates that the person after whose name it occurs died in childhood.

THE CANADIAN AND AMERICAN DESCENDANTS OF
JOHN BRAND AND MARGARET HEAD

FIRST GENERATION

0-JOHN BRAND, the progenitor of the family, was born in 1757. He was the son of Jacob Brand. His mother's maiden name was Sparowe. The pedigree of the Sparowes is given in a little book entitled The Martyrs of the Cornhill, published in 1886 by Pawsey and Hayes, at the Ancient House, Ipswich, Suffolk, England. John Brand resided in Suffolk County, England, at Acton, a village five miles northeast of Sudbury, where he had a 100 acre farm of his own. He married Margaret Head, whose mother came from a family named Wakelin. He and his wife had twelve children in all, four of whom are known to have emigrated to America. Of the four who went to live in America three were sons and one was a daughter. John Brand died in 1841. His children of whom the names are known are:

- 1-Jonathan. (See pg. 9)
- 2-Daniel. born 1799 or 1800 at Great Command.
- 3-Benjamin, born Mar. 10, 1802 (Probably the eighth or ninth child), in Acton.
- 4-John Sparowe, said to have lived for a time in Canada, but later returned to England, where he spent the rest of his life.

5-(A daughter) Born in England. Emigrated to America.

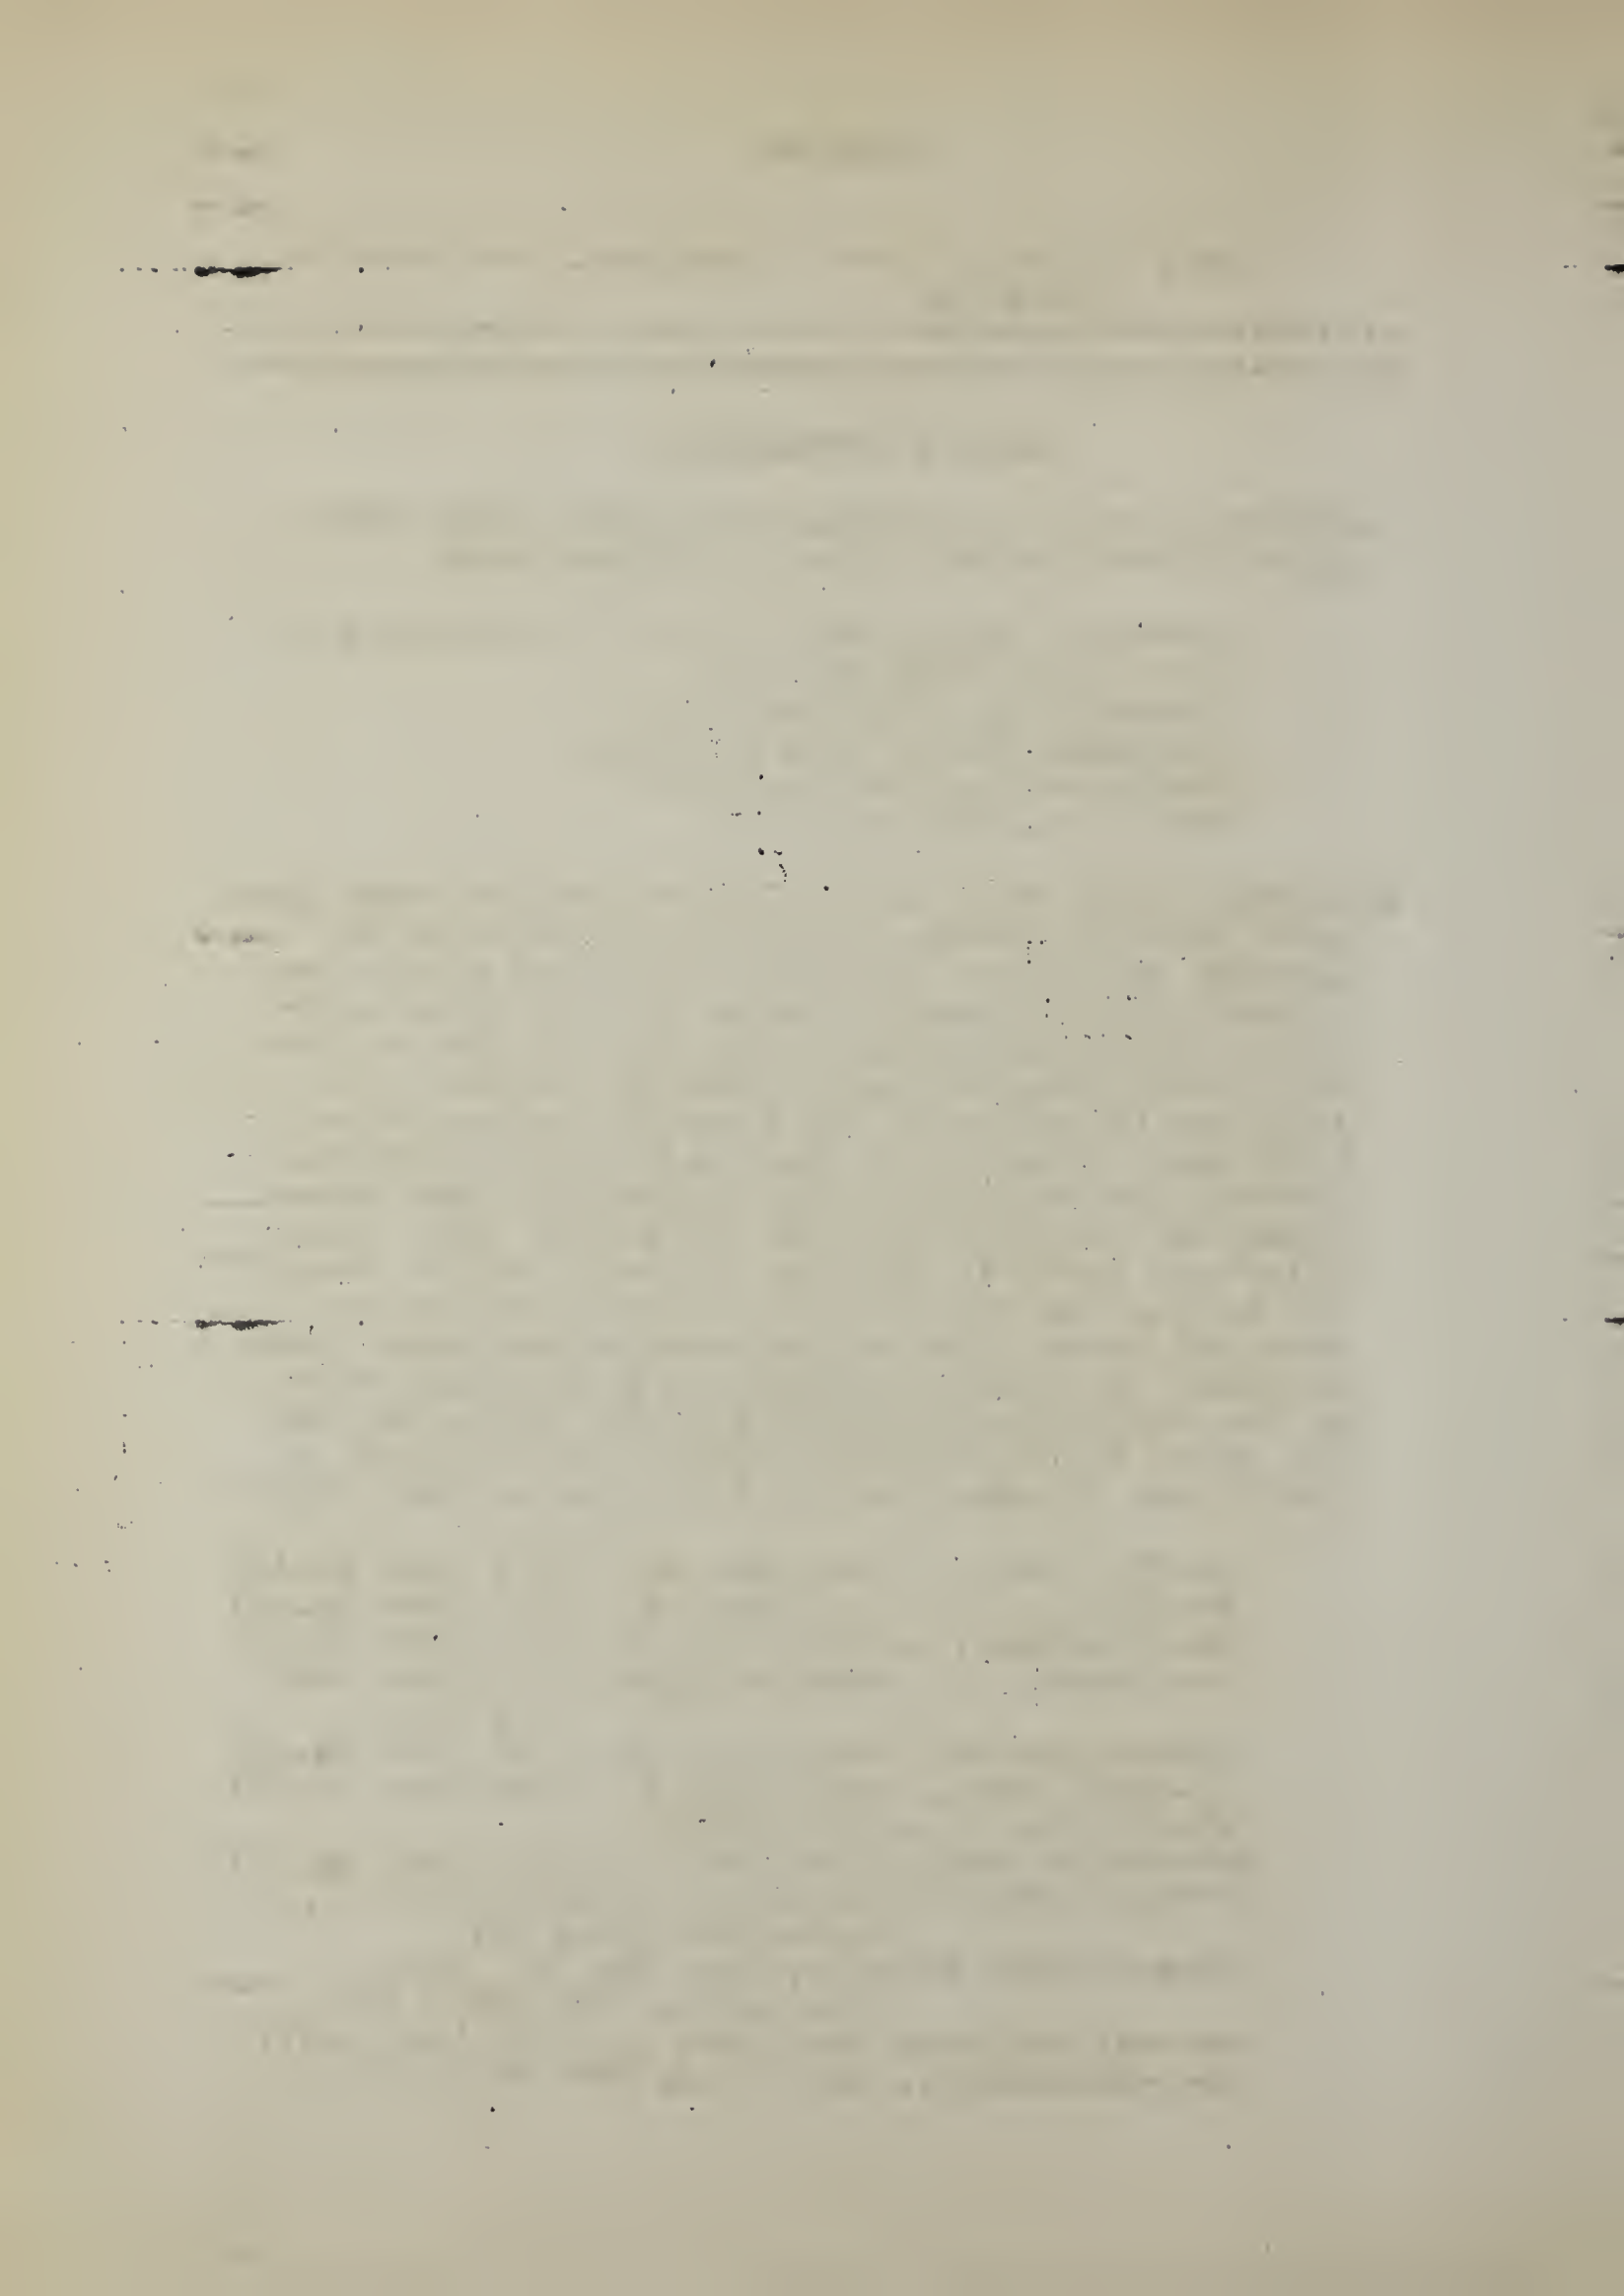

SECOND GENERATION

1-JONATHAN BRAND, emigrated to America about 1820.
Married Pamela Ford. Their children were:

- 12-Pamelia. (See page 14).
- 13-Charlotte. (See page 14).
- 14-Edward James. (See page 14)
- 15-Harriette. (See page 15).
- 16-Lavina. (See page 15).

2-DANIEL BRAND, born about 1799 or 1800 at Great Command, Suffolk County, England. He emigrated to America in 1819 or 1820 and settled on a farm two miles from Port Hope, Ontario shortly after arriving in North America. He died on his farm on the Lake Shore Road, in Hope Township, on Mar. 17, 1872. He is buried in the Presbyterian Cemetery, Port Hope, Ontario. He married Elizabeth Sexton, probably at Port Hope. The Old Daniel Brand Homestead was bought originally by Daniel Brand from Elizabeth Sexton's father. The farm, which covers 100 acres, has belonged to the Brand family for over 120 years. Its present owners are Maude Brand Roebuck, Fred Carlton Brand and Edna Brand, three of the children of Malcolm Eliakim Brand, who was the tenth child of Daniel Brand. The children of Daniel and Elizabeth were: (All born in Port Hope)

3-BENJAMIN BRAND, SR.- born May 10, 1802 in Acton, a village near Sudbury, Suffolk County, England. He was married Oct. 7, 1823 to Abigail Baker King. While still in England he served an apprenticeship at the butcher's trade. He and his family left England and arrived in New York City in the spring of 1827, after a sailing voyage of about twelve weeks.

They settled at Albany, N.Y., remaining there until 1833, when they removed to Tug Hill, four miles north-east of Constableville, N.Y. In 1850 they removed to a farm $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. Following the death of his first wife, Benjamin Brand, Sr. was married in June 1858 to a widow by the name of Mrs. Williams. Mrs. Williams' maiden name was Sally Ann Bixby.

In 1855 Benjamin Brand, Sr. and family removed to Section 23 in the town of Richland, just east of Faribault, Minnesota. In 1870 he purchased a few acres on the southwestern outskirts of Faribault, to which he removed. He died Dec. 3, 1882 and is buried in Maple Lawn Cemetery at Faribault.

Abigail Baker King, the first wife of Benjamin Brand, Sr., was born 30, 1803 at Sutton, Ipswich, Suffolk County, England. She died Dec. 30, 1855 near Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. She was the eldest daughter of William King and Abigail (?) Baker, both of Ipswich, England. William King, a farmer and local Baptist preacher, was born between 1780 and 1783, and died about 1853. Abigail Baker was born about 1785, and died about 1819. William King then married a second time.

Now that the main facts in the life of Benjamin Brand, Sr. have been given, we shall give a more detailed account by quoting from a letter written by Oliver Franklin Brand, one of Benjamin Brand Sr.'s children. The contents of this letter are given almost intact, except for certain minor modifications made necessary by the nature and scope of the present genealogy. The letter contains the following details:

Benjamin Brand, Sr. and his wife and two children, Benjamin, Jr. and Baker, left England about Jan. 2, 1827 on a sailing vessel, landing at New York City on March 26, 1827. They remained near Albany, N.Y. until the fall of 1832 or the spring of 1833. From 1827 to 18__ Benjamin, Sr. tried running a meat market in the city of Albany. The spring of 1830, 1831 or 1832 found him gardening on an island in the Hudson River, near Albany. He had a cow and three horses. On the 6th of May, 1832 came a great flood, caused by heavy rains up in the Adirondack Mountains. It brought the melted snow down so rapidly that the island was flooded three feet deep, and Benjamin and his wife saved only one horse and the cow. A

An Albany lawyer named Garrit Vanness Deniston, who had 2200 acres of land on Tug Hill, near Turin, Lewis County, N.Y., got Benjamin Brand to move out on to it and act as his agent in surveying and selling it. Tug Hill was in the town of Turin, now called High Market. Turin is about four miles from Constableville. Tug Hill is about 300 to 400 feet above the valleys around. It is in the foothills of the Adirondack Mountains. Benjamin Brand moved onto this land in the spring or summer of 1833, buying 106 acres of it for himself. The soil was wet and cold, and very stony. When he moved there it was a dense wilderness covered over with very heavy timber, consisting of maple, beach, birch, balsam, spruce and hemlock. Snow was six feet deep on the level. Timber cut on top of the snow left stumps eight feet high. In 1833 the nearest neighbor was two miles away. Benjamin Brand, Sr. walked two miles and cut wood at fifty cents a cord; and packed food in two miles on his back. The woods supplied plenty of wild game; deer, partridge, rabbits and bear. Wolves and panthers were also in evidence. Benjamin sold land to English, Irish, Welsh and American settlers.

Benjamin's wife returned to England for a visit just once, some time previous to 1845. Benjamin also went back to England just once, most likely soon after his father's death, which occurred in 1841. The children had to work for farmers when very young.

In 1849 Benjamin, Jr. went west to Wisconsin, looking for a new farm location. That autumn Benjamin, Sr. also went there and bargained for 80 acres of land in section 19, Township of Fond du Lac, Fond du Lac County, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the city on the Waupun road. A site for a schoolhouse at the north-west corner had been given from the 80 acres, while the Fond du Lac and Waupun roads cut off four or five acres from the north-west corner of the 80.

Benjamin, Sr. sold his farm on Tug Hill to a merchant by the name of Johnson, and in part payment took a quantity of boots. On May 14, 1850 he and his family left the old home on Tug Hill and went by team to Rome, N.Y. There were still snowbanks by the sides of the road on Tug Hill. From Rome they took a canal boat, going by the Erie Canal to Buffalo. There they took passage on the steamer Niagara, going by way of the Great Lakes to Sheboygan, Wisconsin. From thence they went by team through the woods to their new home, where they arrived May 26, 1850. Benjamin, Jr. was already there with old Isaac Crowfoot, from whom Benjamin, Sr. had bought. Their new farm was nearly all prairie land, with a large slough or swamp on it. South and north-east there were openings of timber. In the first $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles toward Fond du Lac there were only two settlers, Jerry Homiston and John Turner. The latter was a brother of Oliver F. Brand's aunt Cynthia Ransom.

In 1864 Benjamin Sr. and Benjamin Jr. went to Minnesota, each with a wagon and a span of horses. With them were two other children of Benjamin Sr., Elizabeth and Susan, and the three little girls of Benjamin, Jr. They ended by trading their Wisconsin land for the east half of Section 22, Town of Richland, Rice County, Minnesota. They drove back to Wisconsin, and moved out to Minnesota in the summer of 1865, with their teams, a cow and 100 sheep, which they drove along before them. In the autumn of 1870 Benjamin, Sr. traded the Richland land for twelve acres in the southwest suburbs of Faribault, Minnesota, where he lived until his death. On the morning of December 3, 1882, as he was dressing, he fell over dead.

Benjamin Brand, Sr. had no children by his second wife. His first wife, Abigail Baker King, bore him the following children: (See pgs.17-22)

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a review of the literature on the topic of the role of the state in the development of the economy. It is found that the state has played a significant role in the development of the economy in many countries, particularly in the case of developing countries. The state has been involved in the provision of infrastructure, the regulation of the economy, and the provision of social services. The role of the state has been particularly important in the case of countries that have experienced economic crises, where the state has been able to provide the necessary support to the economy.

He is now president of the Brand Peony Farms, Inc. of Faribault and was president of the American Peony Society in 1925, 1926 and 1927. He was married Nov. 4, 1895 in Linden, Minn. to Hansine Louise Christianson of Linden. She was born Oct. 5, 1870 in Linden.

The Brand Peony Farms, Inc. is one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country. The following is quoted from Archie M. Brand's history of the business as he himself wrote it for the "Brand Peony Manual". Several passages have been deleted in order to bring the account within the bounds of this work:

"In the spring of 1867 my father, Oliver F. Brand, then a young man of 23, came to Faribault from his old home in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. He came intending to make Faribault his home and to establish there a nursery, the first nursery in the State of Minnesota. From Fond du Lac, Wisconsin to Faribault, Minnesota is a distance of over three hundred miles and the greater portion of this journey he made afoot."

"During the spring of 1867 he made a small planting of nursery stock consisting of apple grafts and peonies on land lately homesteaded from the government by my grandfather, Benjamin Brand, and situated in the town of Richland, fourteen miles southeast of Faribault. This is the first nursery planting of which there is any record in the state of Minnesota. A portion of this planting of peonies was still growing and blooming, where originally planted, as late as 1916."

"My father soon realized that it was not practical to attempt to grow nursery stock so far from a railroad and by the next spring he had moved to Faribault; and, renting ground in the western portion of the city, he started the growing of nursery stock, mostly apple trees."

"It was during 1869 that the opportunity for the purchase of the grounds where the nursery now stands was presented to him. Until his retirement he conducted here a general nursery, small fruits, evergreens and forest trees being the main items sold."

"Minnesota was then a frontier state and little thought was given to beautifying its homes, hence few shrubs and flowers were grown. But my father was always a flower lover, and even in those early days he grew a full acre of peonies."

"As the state grew older the demand became greater for ornamentals. He increased his peony plantings. In 1888 he purchased twenty-five varieties of peonies different from any he then possessed. From then on he purchased every variety of peony that he saw offered. By 1894 his collection ran up to over a thousand varieties."

"In the fall of 1899 I became associated with my father in the business. Beginning about 1903 father's health began to fail and from now on, although keenly interested in the fields, he gave very little supervision to them. All of that work fell to me."

"The partnership between my father and myself lasted until the fall of 1911 when father retired from business and moved to California."

"I have been interested in peonies as far back as I can remember. As a little boy I followed my father about the fields and talked with him about the many things we grew. However, my mind first really centered on the peony in 1903. From that day to this I have worked constantly to produce new and better peonies."

"In the fall of 1903, all peony seedlings which were deemed worthy of further trial were lifted, divided and planted and later were thoroughly tested out. From this bed came all of those varieties which are known as Brand varieties. During the season of 1907, quite a few were named and offered for sale, but we were unknown at that time as peony people and it was several years before any sales worth while were made."

"On father's retiring from the business, his interests were sold to a Mr. Kinney, who remained with me for five years in the general nursery business. Mr. Kinney never had much time for peonies, but I never lost faith or interest in the flower. When Mr. Kinney retired from the business in 1916, I became sole owner, and my work with the peony began in earnest. I began a more extensive advertising campaign and gradually the peony business began to come this way."

"In the fall of 1918, I was so fortunate as to employ Miss Myrtle Gentry to take charge of my office for me. I found her so efficient in the work, that, after she had been with me two years, I induced her to become associated with me in the business and placed in her hands the entire sales part of the business."

"I now felt safe in expanding the business to a degree I would not otherwise have dared to do. Our business rapidly developed until we have now reached the point where we believe we do as large a retail business in the better sorts of peonies as is done by any company in the world, and our product goes out to all parts of the world."

Archie Brand and his father Oliver F. Brand stand foremost among the American originators of new and better varieties of peonies. Together they produced in their fields and laboratories 28 new varieties. Among these are the Amanda Yale (named for Oliver Brand's sister-in-law, Sarah Amanda Yale, wife of Garrit V.D. Brand), 1907; the Mary Brand (named for Archie Brand's mother), 1907; Ruth Brand (named for Archie Brand's niece, daughter of his brother Frank), 1907; Brand's Magnificent, 1918. Working independently after the death of his father, Archie Brand has originated at least 15 further varieties, among which are the Hansina Brand (named for his wife), 1922; the Mrs. A.M. Brand, 1925.

394-FRANK ROYAL BRAND (son of Oliver Franklin, of Benjamin Sr., see page 21), born Aug. 5, 1874 in Faribault, Minn. He lived at Sherwood and McMinnville, Tennessee from 1884 to 1886. Except for this two year interlude, he lived in Faribault from the time of his birth until the spring of 1898. He then moved to a farm near Faribault, where he lived until 1908. He then sold out and moved to Shell Lake, Wisconsin, where he has since been engaged in the farm implement business. For two years (1920 and 1921) he served as president of the village of Shell Lake. On Oct. 23, 1898 he was married in Faribault, Minn. to Kathryn Ellen Cromer of Faribault. Kathryn Cromer was born June 14, 1874 in Cannon City, Rice Co., Minn. She was the daughter of William Frederick Cromer and Hannah Roach Wilson. The offspring of Frank and Kathryn was:

He then transferred to Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., where he was in attendance from 1923 to 1926. He graduated from Cornell in 1926 with the degree of A.B. and a major in French and Spanish.

During the school year of 1926-27 he attended the University of Strasbourg, France, where he took further work in French under the A.D. Weil Fellowship. He taught French and Spanish from 1927 to 1928 at Cook Academy, Montour Falls, N.Y.

From 1928 to 1929 he taught French and Spanish at Hobart College, Geneva, N.Y. During the school year of 1929-30 he taught the same languages at Central College, Fayette, Missouri.

From 1930 to 1932 he did graduate work in French and Spanish at Cornell University, for which he was granted the degrees of M.A. and Ph.D. From 1932 to 1933 he operated a tutoring school in Ithaca, N.Y. From 1933 to 1942 he was professor of French, Spanish and German at Cazenovia Junior College, a two year college at Cazenovia, N.Y. Since 1942 he has been assistant professor of Modern Languages at The Citadel, the Military College of South Carolina, in Charleston, S.C. APPENDIX

CIVIL WAR RECORD OF OLIVER FRANKLIN BRAND (SON OF BENJAMIN BRAND, SR.), AS CONTAINED IN HIS REMINISCENCES * * * * *

The Oliver Franklin Brand referred to in the above title is the one whose biography appears on page 21 of this work. Oliver Brand wrote these reminiscences in old age after he had retired. Many passages which appeared in the original draft have been omitted.

During the previous fall (1859) John Brown had made his raid on Harpers Ferry. He was taken prisoner, tried and condemned to death. On December 2nd, on the school play ground, my sister Sue said to me, "This is the day John Brown is to be hung." That awakened my first real interest in the stirring events of the time. Old Elder Mc Gee, a Wesleyan Methodist, preached Brown's funeral sermon at our schoolhouse. He weighed above 250 pounds and having been a conductor on the "Underground railroad", assisting slaves to escape to Canada, his zeal for the cause was fully equal to his weight. We sang Whittier's song beginning with the words-

"John Brown of Ossawatimie spoke on his dying day,
I will not have to shrive my soul a priest in slavery's pay."

Elder Mc Gee took off his coat and vest, then his shirt collar, unbuttoned the top button at his throat, rolled up his sleeves, and for an hour and a half played the slaveholders without mercy.

From that time on the war fever increased rapidly. The presidential campaign was on in the summer of 1860, Lincoln having been nominated in June.

I heard Stephen A. Douglas speak at Fond du Lac, Wisc. It was the first occasion upon which I ever heard a great political speaker.

In December 1860 the government vessel Star of the West, sent to provision the fortress in Charleston harbor, was fired on, adding fresh fuel to the fire and strengthening the war spirit. Shortly after that startling event I was chosen editor of our school paper for a term of two weeks, and my editorials did not lack a genuine fighting spirit in keeping with the times. That was my last winter at school. In our debating clubs we discussed the dominant questions then engrossing the attention of all thoughtful people: slavery, freedom, states rights, etc. About the last of February I quit school.

Father and I were clearing wood on March 5, the day following Lincoln's inauguration as president. Two neighbors, Griswald an abolitionist and Reddy a Democrat, came our way and talked of Lincoln's inaugural address. Griswald thought it favored the slaveholders while Reddy was sure it was too favorable to the Republicans.

About the middle of April as I was chopping stove-wood by the house two farmers drove past, each with a load of lumber. They were discussing the national troubles. I heard one of them say, "I should not be surprised if the whole thing blows over without a gun being fired." The other agreed with him. Only an hour later my father returned from the city, bringing the news that the day before, by order of General Beauregard, Fort Sumter had been fired on and the great struggle launched to establish a Southern Confederacy founded on human bondage. President Lincoln had responded by calling for 75,000 volunteers for ninety days service.

The next night I attended a patriotic meeting in Fond du Lac. Many enlisted, two of my schoolmates being among the number. As my father was then in his sixtieth year, still owed several hundred dollars on the farm, and I was his sole helper, I decided not to enlist until after harvest and threshing. Events unfolded rapidly that summer. The disastrous battle of Bull Run, followed by the President's call for 300,000 men for three years' service, aroused the nation to a better sense of what was before us.

Harvest was rather late that year. John Turner's nineteen year old son helped us gather in the crop. On the last day, September 7, his cousin Will Harper helped us. A regiment of cavalry was being organized at Ripon, about fourteen miles distant, and a company of infantry at Fond du Lac. It being Saturday, we three agreed to go to Ripon on Monday and enlist together in the cavalry. Sunday night I learned that they had gone to Ripon that day and enlisted. Not liking this, I arose early Monday morning, dressed, quietly left the house, and walked to Fond du Lac and enlisted in the infantry company being formed by Capt. Thomas H. Green.

I then got a furlough of one week and returned home and helped stack and thresh the grain. Father gave me a written permit, and on September 16 I went into camp at Fond du Lac and was drilled by Charles Morgan in the awkward squad along with Edward Darling, James Wood and Anthony Durant. We were soon sent to Milwaukee where we were incorporated into Col. John C. Starkweather's First Wisconsin Infantry. He had been colonel of the 90-days regiment and was then raising a regiment for three years service. My captain had been a lieutenant in the Fond du Lac 90-day company, and several privates and non-commissioned officers had also served in that company. Among the latter was Sergeant Norton B. Mack, destined later to become my brother-in-law. He had worked a few days the preceding spring for our neighbor, George Reddy. I had met him twice during that time and formed a strong liking for him. On October 8, 1861 we were sworn into the service at Camp Scott on the lake shore north of the city.

We started south on the 28th, and on the 29th arrived at Jeffersonville, Indiana, where we remained two weeks. We then proceeded to West Point, Kentucky, by boat from Louisville. While at Jeffersonville, General Sherman came over from Louisville to inspect us. He was then in command of the department, but was soon after removed, Buell succeeding him.

On December 3 we broke camp at West Point and started for Elizabethtown, 25 miles distant. As we were raw recruits and had never made an all-day march with full loads on our shoulders, we loaded ourselves with from 25 to 50 per cent more than we should have carried on a long march. Ten miles was all we should have marched under such conditions; in fact, most of us were jaded and tired out even at that distance. I had never before experienced such pains in my legs and shoulders. Night came on before we reached our destination. Men were constantly dropping out from exhaustion, though we stopped every mile or two for a few minutes' rest. The road was muddy. It froze with the setting of the sun, and every step with our sewed shoes on the rough, frozen ground was torture. About two o'clock the next morning we reached Elizabethtown with only a third of our number in the ranks; the rest had fallen out.

On this march our first man was killed. Holding his musket in his left hand, he stopped to dip a cup of water from a creek. As he raised up a strap caught his gun lock, discharging the musket, the ball passing through his head.

Upon our arrival at Elizabethtown we were incorporated into Negley's brigade, along with the 77th, 78th and 79th Pennsylvania regiments and the 38th Indiana. We camped a few days at Bacon Creek, a short distance from Lincoln's birthplace in Hardin County, and on the seventeenth marched to Munfordville on Green River. The bridge at that point having been destroyed by the Confederates, we could not advance until it was rebuilt. We were putting up our tents at Munfordville when the long roll sounded, which meant fall into regimental line at double-quick for battle. The 32nd Indiana regiment had been attacked while deployed on picket duty.

across the river and sixteen men killed. We moved at double-quick for about a mile and a half to the river back below the bridge site, where we lay until daylight the next morning, awaiting the coming of the enemy.

General Buell concentrated more than 40,000 men at Munfordsville, where we remained until the fall of Fort Donaldson, about the middle of February, 1862. We were ordered to the latter point and our army marched one day in that direction, but Grant having taken the fort, we were ordered back to the old camp and south to Cave City, about twenty miles. I was coming down with jaundice and was left behind with a number of other sick men. As soon as I was able to do so, I started to join my regiment; got aboard an open stock-car on a freight train and, although it was bitterly cold, reached my company that day. The next day was Washington's Birthday. It rained all day but I was put on camp guard. The following day we had brigade inspection, so that I could not get away to visit Mammoth Cave, which was only two miles distant. The next day we moved south. The whole of Buell's army was moving to Nashville, Tennessee, while Grant's army was moving up the Tennessee River.

We reached the north bank of the river at Bowling Green, Ky. on the 27th of February and camped there one day; then crossed the river and continued on south. I became exhausted and falling out of the ranks stopped by the roadside under the eaves of a barn ten miles from Nashville. Most southern barns had a roof standing out several feet from the body of the building with feed mangers on the outside of the building. I got into a manger and stayed there until morning; then got a ride to Edgefield, to the north of Nashville, where I found my company. I was pretty yellow with jaundice by that time (March 2), but soon recovered.

We camped two miles south of the city of Nashville and remained there three weeks; then moved on twenty miles southwest to Franklin, where we stopped a couple of days. On the first of April we started for Columbia. That night my company and a company from the 79th Pennsylvania were detailed as provost guard for Columbia, with our captain as provost marshal, and the next morning we started at daybreak for Columbia, where we were stationed as guards while the whole army passed through. Columbia was a nice, quiet Southern village of about 1500 inhabitants. We remained there until May 23.

Buell's army, with the exception of Negley's brigade, went to Pittsburg Landing, the first brigade arriving on the night of the first day's battle, and the remainder the next morning in time to save Grant's army from defeat. Negley's brigade was left at Mount Pleasant, 13 miles from Columbia.

We then moved to Caliooca, where we were joined by four companies of our regiment under Major Bingham. From there we set out 4000 strong en route for Chattanooga, Tenn. It was a forced march to make a feint attack on that town for the purpose of keeping the Confederates from reinforcing Lee, the Army of the Potomac being then engaged in the attempt to take Richmond. We passed through Pulaski and camped at Tullahoma. The next day we marched to Elk River, where we rested over Sunday.

The following day we passed through Winchester, county seat of Franklin County, and beheld the western ramparts of the Cumberland Mountains for the first time. The next day we climbed the mountains and marched for some time on the top during a drenching rain. Our wagon train carrying our blankets not keeping up with us, and having no blankets with us, being on a forced march, from 25 to 30 miles a day, we slept on the rainsoaked ground in our wet clothing. Without breakfast the following morning we resumed our march, soon descending the mountain into Sweden Cove in the Sequatchie Valley.

As our advance guard started to descend the mountains, which were covered with timber, they came upon a force of Confederate cavalry. The Confederates turned tail and fled. Our battery was hurried to the front and threw some shells among them after they had got down into the valley, killing a few horses and men. During the skirmish two of our men were killed. We buried them there in the valley.

That afternoon as we went down into the narrow valley and looked back at the mountain sides covered with a dense growth of timber with its early June mantle of green, I thought I had never seen anything so grand. The water of Battle Creek, which we forded several times, was very cold. We were then in the southwestern part of Loyal, in Marion County, East Tennessee. There were no slaves in that section. That valley divided the Cumberland and Walden ranges, which rose to nearly a thousand feet above the valley.

At about eleven o'clock on the night of June 6 we went into camp at the southeastern end of the valley where the Chattanooga road starts up the Walden Ridge. We had marched 30 miles and were all jaded out. Of my company there were only five -- Lieutenant Rice, myself, and three other privates -- just enough to stack arms. All the rest had fallen out, but caught up with us before morning.

The next day we crossed Walden Ridge and camped on the Tennessee River seven miles above Chattanooga. Our advance had reached the river opposite the city earlier in the day and had an engagement with the enemy. On Sunday morning, June 8, we marched down close to the river and lay in the timber in front of a battery which shelled the enemy over our heads for some time. What was going on elsewhere we could not see. Sometime in the course of the afternoon we withdrew, and as the country was timbered nearly all the way, we had not seen Chattanooga although we were close to it. We camped that night on top of the ridge overlooking the Tennessee Valley, Missionary Ridge and the northwest corner of Georgia. The view from that point was magnificent.

The next day we continued our retrograde movement until we got down into the valley, where we camped for the night. In the morning we ascended another range of mountains to our right, reaching the village of Altamont late that evening. From there we headed for Shelbyville, where we remained nearly three weeks. Sargeant Mack was then left in charge of our tents and a number of sick from our four companies, while we marched to Athens, Alabama, from whence about the first of July we proceeded by rail to Bridgeport, on the Tennessee River west of Chattanooga, and went into camp at the mouth of Battle Creek, a few miles above Bridgeport. Buell's army was there and our regiment was once more united. The enemy lay just across the Tennessee River.

On the Fourth of July my company was stationed under command of Lieutenant Klock as pickets along Battle Creek, I being stationed on the extreme end of the line at the point where the creek emptied into the river. I was the only picket whose beat extended to the river. During the night I heard considerable noise across the river where the bank was lined with trees. I sent word to Lieutenant Klock. He came down and listened and then advised General McCook, who ordered the picket line withdrawn and had the battery shell the other side of the river. In the morning we perceived that the rebels had been cutting the timber on the bank and digging rifle pits. Our picket lines were on friendly terms, and we often amused ourselves by calling to one another across the river.

On July 24 we marched to Bridgeport and entrained for Mooresville, Alabama. The cars being loaded with camp equipment, we were obliged to ride on top. We got on in the evening and slept on the car tops, but the train did not start until the next day. It was very dangerous riding on cars through that hostile country, many a soldier being shot by bushwhackers hiding in the woods close to the track. The engines were very poor and we made slow time. We slept one night lying on the tops of the cars with our legs hanging over the edge.

Passing through Huntsville we reached Mooresville a few miles east of Decatur where the Nashville and Mobile Railroad crossed the river. In a few days we moved our camp nearer to Decatur. Crossing the river one day, we came upon the bodies of some of our men who had been killed by guerrillas. There was no large force of the enemy anywhere in our vicinity, but there were plenty of small bands. One day while at Decatur we received word that General Mc Cook had been murdered by these miscreants while riding in an ambulance. We made a night march back to Mooresville, where we remained a few days. There we were joined by sergeant Mack and our boys who had been left at Shelbyville. Mack was very weak from camp diarrhea. He was ordered to the camp hospital, where I brought him a cup of chicken broth.

A couple of days before we left there, as I was standing camp guard, I was seized with an attack of the bloody flux. I was relieved from duty, and in less than twenty-four hours the disease had so weakened me that I could scarcely walk. Blood passed me nearly once an hour. I was put in the camp hospital.

We broke camp the next day (it was about August 20, 1862) and proceeded by train to Nashville. We were in box cars and one of our boys in the car with me died before we reached Nashville. He died of chronic diarrhea, that plague which swept away so many of our soldiers. It resulted from bad food, bad water, exhausting marches, and the exposure incident to the life of a soldier, all of which gradually broke down the constitution, deranging the entire digestive track, until flux set in, which frequently closed the chapter in a few days.

We were put into the camp hospital at Nashville, Sergeant Mack, Private Scott of my company, and myself, all down with the bloody flux. Buell's whole army was moving north as the Confederates under General Bragg to the east of us moved in that direction. It was a race to see which would reach the Ohio River first. Soon after we reached Nashville Captain Green secured Mack's discharge, thinking to send him home; but the enemy had cut the railroad north of us and he could not leave. We three boys from Company K had an interesting time together, lying side by side on our backs until September 1. Mack was very patriotic; said that when he got home he expected to aid the government in some way.

When our regiment received orders to march, I was taken in an ambulance to the city general hospital No. 4. It was a large three-story school building, projecting into the street in an elevated and healthy part of the city, perhaps eighty rods from the square. Mack and Scott were brought there a day or two later, there being no prospect of sending the former home.

Negley was in command of the city with an active army of 10,000 men. There were 11,000 sick and paroled soldiers there, gathered from all our forces that had been campaigning that summer around Nashville and in the territory to the southeast and southwest, as far as Chattanooga and Pittsburg Landing. General Forest, the Confederate commander, gave Negley considerable trouble, although of course he would do nothing that might injure the people of Nashville, for they were his own people.

Our sick were distributed among sixteen general hospitals, Zollicoffer Barracks, and certain other barracks. There were seventy cots in my ward, arranged in four rows. Many deaths occurred every day; sometimes as many as five or six in our building alone. The government paid $10 for the burial of each soldier. Within a short time after we reached the hospital, no food fit for an invalid was to be had. Sour baker's bread and boiled beef were our staple diet.

I spent considerable time with Norton Mack, writing for him to his people at Fond du Lac. About the eighth of September as I sat by his side he said, smiling as he pointed upward: "Brand, don't you see those little angels up there?" "No", I answered, "I don't see anything." "Well", he said, "I see them: they are going away now". With that disease most soldiers became delirious three or four days before they died. He died at three o'clock on the morning of September 11, and Scott died the same hour.

I gradually grew weaker and in all probability would have died had it not been that I never for a moment thought I was in any danger of dying. It became my custom to walk about some every day, although I was but a walking skeleton. I weighed 160 pounds in my shirtsleeves at Columbia in May; now I was reduced to about 115 pounds. I had not been shaved for some three months and could not have been fair to look upon. I had no money. Sometimes I visited a private family that lived near the hospital, and on such occasions an old colored woman would give me a little fresh milk, which helped me to keep on my feet.

One day it was decided to send a body of about five hundred paroled and discharged men north, to save the expense of feeding them. At the time I had an abcess under my right arm which was so painful that I could not sleep. About two o'clock on the morning of October 27 the hospital physician came into our ward and conversed with the nurses as to which patients were in the most dangerous condition. Being wide awake, I heard him say: "There is No. 42; if he could get home he might recover, but he can't stand it much longer here." No. 42 was my cot. That statement saved my life. It was the first intimation which I had sensed that I was near the grave. About nine o'clock the post surgeon, General Weed, walked through the alley at the foot of my cot. I had been there eight weeks and had never seen him in our ward before. As he approached I summoned courage and spoke: "Doctor, do you think I ought to be discharged." He turned and stepped to my side, felt my ribs and said: "Yes, my boy, I will discharge you. I doubt if any sick person ever received a dose of medicine which proved so efficacious as those seven words. In the next three days I seemed to double my strength.

It had not taken a quarter of a minute to settle the question and he passed on. I suppose he took the number of my cot. On the morning of the twenty-eighth I went to General Negley's headquarters where one of my company, Henry Rice, was private secretary. I explained my case and he said, "Perhaps your discharge paper is here." Taking down a bunch of discharge papers he found mine among them and immediately took it in to the general, who signed it.

The company going north was to start the next day, so that afternoon I gathered together what little I possessed, blanket, extra shirt, knapsack, haversack and canteen, and went to the Zollicoffer barracks, where I spent the night. I slept on the bare floor with only my blanket for a bed.

The next morning Colonel Moody of the 74th Ohio got us into line and we started for the North under command of Captain Collins. We had with us a number of ambulances to carry those who gave out; but as for myself, I rode but little. My strength kept increasing.

When we reached Tyree Springs we were stopped by the Confederates, lined up and searched for revolvers, letters and other articles not permitted under a flag of truce. I had three letters from women in Nashville to friends in the North, to be mailed at Louisville. They were taken from me, but were returned after examination. I remember but little of the trip except that it was fine autumn weather and that I slept one night at a farmer's house on a feather bed, but did not sleep so well as I had on the ground.

We reached Bowling Green, Kentucky on November 3, 1862. Just south of the town we encountered the advance guard of our army marching toward Nashville. They had just reached the open stream four miles from Bowling Green. It was a stream perhaps forty feet wide flowing underground, but at that point appearing as a river about fifty feet below the level, flowing in the open for ten or fifteen rods. Its waters were of a deep blue. Passing that way as we went south in February, we had filled our canteens from those same waters.

It had taken us nearly six days to make the overland march from Nashville, a distance of seventy miles. The toilsome journey was now ended. At Bowling Green we were placed aboard freight cars and conveyed to Louisville, where we were paid off and given transportation to our homes. We were then receiving $13 per month. I had not been paid for several months and my check was for $70.

I left that afternoon for Indianapolis, stopped over night in that city, and arrived in Chicago on the following night. We were driven in a two-horse buss through the city to the Northwestern Station, where we took train for Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. The car I entered was very cold and I found it hard to sleep. The stoves were at the ends of the car and wood was the only fuel used. It was so cold that I had to lie down by one of the stoves to get any sleep.

We arrived in Fond du Lac about eight o'clock in the morning of November 7. As one of my old teachers, Amanda Lawrence, then the wife of Levi Tomkins, lived near the station, I went to her house, where I was served a good breakfast. I then started for home, walking to Tanner's tollgate, where I stopped to rest and catch a ride. In a short time Mr. Sawyer (later United States senator) came along with a horse and buggy and took me home. My sister Sue was the first to see me as I was getting out of the buggy and came running out of the house, joyfully exclaiming: "Oliver, you scamp". All received me as one risen from the dead. Father had been up to see Elder Reed in Byron, to get him to preach my funeral sermon. The boys of my company had written home that when they left Nashville I was in very dangerous condition, and getting no word from me, father believed me dead. It was not long before the neighbors, having learned of my return, came to visit us bringing dainties for me to eat along with plenty of advice as to the best manner of recovering my health.
